Further notes

Professor Frank Fenner's career was marked by two achievements of considerable magnitude, the eradication of smallpox and the control of Australia's rabbit plague. As Chair of the Global Commission for the Certification of Smallpox Eradication, Professor Fenner announced the eradication of the disease to the World Health Assembly in 1980.

Professor Fenner was a distinguished virologist and microbiologist who also worked at the ANU and established the Centre for Resources and Environmental studies at the university.
