I believe the name of the southern-most seat should either originate from the language of the traditional custodians of the area or should hold significance with Indigenous people from the area.

I do not believe the proposed name "Bean" should be adopted as it does not reflect a significant history relating to the area.

Australia's Parliament has more work to do in recognising our First Nations peoples and I think the 2018 redistribution provides the perfect opportunity to name a new electorate with a name that holds significance with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Australians.
