

Objection 240

My objections to re-defining the electoral area of the Colac region, from Corangamite to Wannon are as follows:-

Colac is much closer geographically and in regional identity, to Geelong than Hamilton.

Colac currently enjoys the “swinging seat” political benefits of the Corangamite electorate. A change to Wannon, would be a retrospective move to the unwanted past, where a single political party becomes complacent by holding a safe seat majority and progress is consequently thwarted.

The name Corangamite should be retained as the name for the seat, because few, if any residents would identify with the proposed name of Cox.
